

NEW FIGURES IN UNITED STATES SENATE

else to force an amendment to the Buchanan law. That's his program, and he undoubtedly will line up with La Follette, whom he admires, to force the changes.

"People in Iowa laugh to think of Brookhart as a follower of Harding—nevertheless he has made it his policy to be regular with the Republican party in Iowa. We suspect the impression that he is 'hostile' to Harding's policies, if not to him personally, is not far wrong. So far as we recall he has remained significantly silent on the national Administration in his speeches."

Col. Brookhart was born in a log cabin just south of the Iowa line in Missouri in 1869. Before he was old enough to go to school, however, his parents settled on a farm near Bloomfield, Iowa. He was graduated from the Bloomfield High School and later from the Southern Normal School. Following his normal school work he became a school teacher. In 1892 he was admitted to the bar of Iowa, settling in Washington.

He has a Statewide reputation as a railroad rate lawyer. He is not wealthy. Two years ago, running for the nomination for the United States Senate, he opposed Senator A. B. Cummins and came dangerously near to usurping the aged Senator's seat, being defeated by only 19,000 votes.

In a field of six candidates for the nomination last June the Iowa G. O. P. put five other candidates into the field. For nomination 35 per cent. of the vote was required. Brookhart galloped home first, receiving 41.9 per cent. of the votes cast. The organized elements of the party were lined up almost solid against him.

Brookhart in his campaign speeches declared for an adequate soldiers' bonus, to be paid by a tax on war profits and excess profits. He is opposed to a sales tax.

Col. Brookhart was married in 1897 to Jennie Hearn of Washington.

Col. Brookhart is president of the National Rifle Association of America. He enlisted in the Iowa National Guard in 1894 and was Second Lieutenant of the Washington company during the Spanish-American war. After the war he became Captain of the company and began to specialize in marksmanship. During the world war he trained 10,000 officers, 1,000 of these being West Pointers, and 6,000 non-commissioned officers in marksmanship.

WHEELER NOT A RADICAL, BUT OF LIBERAL VIEWS

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

HELENA, Nov. 11.—Burton K. Wheeler, United States Senator elect from Montana, will be one of the youngest members of the United States Senate.

Senator Wheeler is 40 years old. He was born at Hudson, Mass., February 27, 1882, and was married to Lola White of Albany, Ind., September 7, 1907. Senator and Mrs. Wheeler have five children. The oldest is a boy 14 years old and the youngest a baby boy of 3. One girl is 11 years old, another 5 and the third boy is 8.

Burton K. Wheeler is said to have amassed a fortune of $100,000 practicing law. He was educated in the public schools of Hudson, Mass., entered a business college, took up stenography and later earned his way through the University of Michigan law school.

Coming to Montana he practiced his profession in Butte, where he now resides. He is regarded as one of the most brilliant and capable of the younger lawyers in the State. In important litigation he fought against the corporations controlling the various industries of Washington, Mont.

Mr. Wheeler began his public career by being elected to the State Legislature in 1910 and served during the session of 1911, making a conspicuous record. He was United States District Attorney for Montana for five years, having been appointed by former President Wilson in 1912. Senator Wheeler is a progressive Democrat. The conservative Democrats have opposed him constantly, but his excellent record and fighting qualities won for him more votes than three of his opponents combined in the August primaries.

Mr. Wheeler will succeed Senator L. Myers, Democrat, who opposed him vigorously for the Senatorship in 1920. Mr. Wheeler in 1920 had the endorsement of the Non-Partisan League for Governor, although he was nominated as a regular Democrat. This endorsement caused a split in the Democratic ranks, the independents being led by Senator Myers. Wheeler was defeated in 1920 by Joseph M. Dixon, former campaign manager for the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt. Senator Myers did not support his successor in this year's campaign.

B K WHEELER, Montana

Senator-elect Wheeler has no particular hobby. For recreation he enjoys fishing and has a summer home at Lake McDonald in Glacier National Park. His complexion is light. He weighs 180 pounds and is 6 feet 3/4 inch tall.

With regard to his own career in the United States Senate, Mr. Wheeler said he would not align with the radicals or conservatives of that body.

"I am neither radical nor conservative," he explained, "but I shall line up with the progressives of the Democratic and Republican parties. I can say this much, however: I am absolutely opposed to a ship subsidy or a subsidy of any other kind. I shall be in favor of the unseating of Newberry if that question should again come to a vote in the Senate."

"I am absolutely opposed to a high protective tariff, and that includes the present Republican tariff. I regard that as extremely injurious to this country, particularly the West."

BAYARD IS RELATED TO OPPONENT IN RACE

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

WILMINGTON, Nov. 11.—Thomas F. Bayard, elected United States Senator for the long and short terms from Delaware on Tuesday, will be a striking figure at the national capital. In his early fifties, dark complexioned, more than six feet tall and weighing about two hundred pounds, the new Senator is built like an athlete. He wears a flowing black tie. He is a good mixer. If he knows a man at all he knows him at all times and under all conditions.

Mr. Bayard is a graduate of Yale and a lawyer of ability. The only public office he has held in Delaware was that of City Solicitor of Wilmington, an appointive office. For a short time in his early life he was connected with the District Attorney's office in New York city.

At the last election he was a candidate for Mayor, but was defeated by Leroy Harvey, brother-in-law of T. Coleman du Pont, whom Bayard has now defeated for Senator. Bayard comes of a family of Senators. His father, his grandfather and other members of the family have been United States Senators.

His chief characteristic is his outspoken position on all subjects. If he is for something he will say so, and if he is not he will be equally frank. He opposed woman suffrage when his sister, Mrs. William S. Hilles, was one of the national leaders in the movement, and he opposed prohibition and said so. He was equally frank in declaring that now that the prohibition act had been passed he would enforce it as it was his duty to do so. His frankness won votes.

Mr. Bayard is a man of moderate means. He is married and has five children. His wife was a Du Pont and therefore a member of the same family as his opponent for Senator. He is president of the trustees of Delaware Hospital, which has done splendid work here. He is interested in charitable as well as political institutions in Delaware.

THOMAS F BAYARD Delaware

In politics he has held aloof from factions. For several years he was chairman of the Democratic State Committee and has always been an earnest party worker. He was especially outspoken and opposed to the action of Josiah O. Wolcott resigning as United States Senator to become Chancellor of the State and the appointment of T. Coleman du Pont in his place.

Mr. Bayard's election to both short and long terms means that he will serve for six years from next March 4, and also from November 7, election day, to March 4. The short term is the unexpired term of Senator Wolcott, who had resigned his seat, and to succeed whom, Senator Coleman du Pont was appointed until election.

CLEMENCEAU PRACTICED MEDICINE IN NEW YORK

By GEORGE P. LE BRUN.

WHEN Georges Clemenceau arrives in New York he will hardly recognize the city he visited some fifty-six years ago.

There is, however, still standing a two story building with a skylight at 711 Broadway which he will remember as having visited, where the late William E. Marshall, the artist, had his studio. In fact, it was the first call he made on landing here. The writer, a frequent visitor to Marshall's studio in the early '80s, was told by him of his acquaintance with the noted French statesman.

While studying art in Paris Marshall had met Clemenceau, who was then a young medical student. They became warm friends. The sudden death of Mr. Lincoln caused Marshall to give up his studies in the French capital and return to his native land for the purpose of engraving and painting a portrait of the martyr-President.

While with men of all professions he was guided in his quest for knowledge of the social, political and industrial conditions in the United States. He was intensely interested in the city of New York, which was then emerging from the period of depression following the civil war. In speaking of French politics he said: "Marshall, some day France will be a republic and I might be its President."

While here Clemenceau translated several works of John Stuart Mill into French and almost daily visited the Astor Library. He presented to the library a copy of his thesis, "De la Generation des Elements Anatomiques." He practiced medicine among French families in the neighborhood of Washington Square, but he found the establishing of a practice a difficult thing at best and decided that he must find something to do which would bring him a larger income. He sought and obtained a position in a school for girls as a professor of French language and literature at Stamford, Conn., kept by a Miss Allen.

He remained there for two years, fell in love with one of his pupils, a Miss Plummer, proposed marriage and was accepted. The marriage ceremony was performed by Mayor Oakley Hall in the summer of 1889 in the City Hall. Shortly after his marriage he left for France with his bride and kept up a correspondence with Marshall until the latter's death in the same quaint old studio in 1906.

It may not be generally known, but Clemenceau's visit to America was at the urgent request of Marshall and he wrote frequently to Clemenceau to come to New York, and in 1886 he arrived in this city, where he and Marshall renewed the friendship of their student days. He lived in the neighborhood of Washington Square, but spent a great part of his time at Marshall's studio. He was a trifle below the medium height, thin and walked with a slight stoop. He always appeared to be in deep thought. Contrasted with the pallor of his cheeks were his piercing blue eyes, which seemed to burn from beneath the shadow of his broad brimmed hat.

With Marshall he was a frequent visitor at Pfaff's, the Bohemian resort of those days, where in the early '80s met that coterie of which Henry Clay was the head. There Marshall introduced him to a host of congenial acquaintances. Dr. Clemenceau discussed the conditions of the times and by

FERRIS SERVED TWICE AS MICHIGAN'S GOVERNOR

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

DETROIT, Nov. 11.—A man who has reached his 69th year and who, having commenced to work for his livelihood when a mere child, is still engaged in the occupation which he undertook as a youth, and in which he has made a remarkable success—a man is Woodbridge N. Ferris, Senator elect of Michigan, the first Democratic Senator to be elected in this State in the last seventy years.

Mr. Ferris was twice called from the quietude of a teacher's life spent in one of the small cities of the State to the highest executive position in the gift of his fellow citizens of Michigan. He first came into official contact with a Legislature whose majority was politically adverse and with other executive officers opposed to him in their political views. He so conducted himself and his office as to merit and win the friendship, esteem and the cooperation of his political opponents.

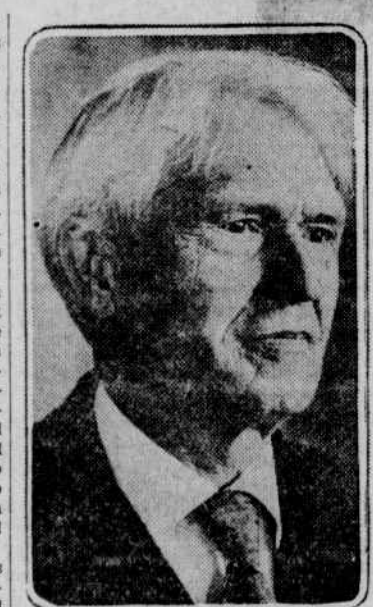

Mr. Ferris served two terms as Governor and made a third but unsuccessful run. He was also defeated in 1892 when he ran for Congress on the Democratic ticket. In 1917, after serving as Governor, he ran for Mayor in his own home town—Big Rapids—and was defeated by a majority of 198. He lost his own ward by thirty-nine votes.

Mr. Ferris's hair is nearly white, but there is plenty of it. His weight is around 155 pounds and he stands 5 feet 9 1/2 inches. He is of a quiet, unexcitable nature, his hobby being the Ferris Institute, now owned by a stock company. He married for the second time about two years ago, his first wife dying five years ago while he was Governor. His wealth is estimated at about $125,000. He has three sons and two grandchildren. The Senator elect was born in a log house near Candor, Tioga county, N. Y.

In 1916 Ferris elected Theodore Roosevelt as a "dangerous man as politicians go," adding that he would like to see Roosevelt nominated for Wilson would beat him, but that he (Ferris) was afraid of Hughes. In 1915 he was afraid of Bryan is a religious fanatic. Consistent in his career and honest in his convictions."

In 1916 he told 5,000 school teachers that he would rather be back teaching school than be Governor of Michigan or President of the United States. In 1903 Ferris was a delegate to the national convention which nominated Bryan for President.

In 1912 he was for Woodrow Wilson for President. He urged candidacy early in 1911. He was a delegate to the Baltimore convention which nominated Wilson. Against his own wishes he became a candidate on the Democratic ticket for Governor of Michigan, chiefly because he believed that as a candidate he could render Wilson his largest possible services. He was elected by a plurality of 24,000 votes.

The gradual building up of the gendarmerie by training Haitians to hold commissions is proceeding satisfactorily. The native officers are rendering excellent service against the time when the gendarmerie will be a purely Haitian force, both rank and file.

Childs Floats Free and Heads for Navy Yard Here.

The United States destroyer Childs went aground at 3 o'clock yesterday morning on Shagwong Reef, in Block Island Sound, four miles northwest of Montauk Point. She floated herself before noon and proceeded slowly under her own power toward the New York Navy Yard with a leak forward.

The salvage ship Falcon was ordered from New York and the mine sweeper Chewink from New London to meet the Childs. At the navy yard it was said the Childs is expected there at 7 o'clock this morning.

HAITIAN ARISTOCRATS JOINING GENDARMERIE

Sons of Best Families Are Seeking Commissions.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Nov. 11.—The sons of the best families in Haiti are seeking commissions in the Haitian Rural Guard, or gendarmerie. Thirty such young men now hold commissions and twenty-one others are awaiting their final examinations after a year of training.

It is from among these officers that President Borno selects his aides. They possess the old type of purely ornamental aides who were usually appointed for political reasons. The newly commissioned officers will not only perform the military duties of gendarme officers, but will attend a military school for two years.

Of the American officers serving with the Haitian gendarmerie, 130 in all, the field officers are Marine Corps officers temporarily serving under the Haitian colors. The senior officer is Lieut.-Col.

do, and Bill taught her many quaint little tricks.

That playing of the harmonica, the trick of holding a razor and drawing it back and forth as though trying to shave, the way she had of washing her face and then drying it vigorously with a towel—all these and other accomplishments which are much for an elephant, are due to the hours of painstaking instruction furnished by Bill Snyder out of the goodness of his heart.

As long as Bill was at the Zoo Hattie would do her tricks in contentment. Her present indisposition goes back to one day five years ago when Bill Snyder retired as chief keeper and went to spend the rest of his days in Pine Valley. When Bill left Hattie aulked, for why should an elephant go to a lot of trouble when there is no one to appreciate or applaud? She would not perform for other keepers. It was Bill Snyder who taught her, and she remained faithful to him. But Bill is getting old and can't make the trip to New York every time Hattie has a sinking spell. And now, with the paralysis and what specialists who are examining the stricken Hattie. Hattie warned up to Bill, something that Jewel would not do.

ELEPHANT HATTIE IS DYING, STILL TRUE TO KEEPER BILL

African Pachyderm Captured With Sister Thirty-five Years Ago, Long Pet of Central Park Zoo—Appears to Have Paralysis.

Veterinarians who are supposed to know something of the ailments to which elephants fall heir went yesterday to see Hattie, one of the trick elephants in Central Park Zoo, who has been slumped over on one side since Friday night suffering from what appears to be a stroke of paralysis. Her keepers, as well as the elephant specialists, do not believe she will live much longer, and thus will pass Hattie, whose record in the Zoo is without blemish.

Hattie and another elephant, Jewel, presumably her sister, were captured thirty-five years ago in Africa. The captors estimated that they were about fifteen years old at the time. They were transported to New York, where Jewel, the unregenerate sister, failed to like civilization, refused to learn any tricks whatever, and has passed her days doing nothing more than eating and being an elephant. As for Hattie, she has been little more than a show attraction in the Zoo last night there would have been little worry, for Jewel dead would mean only one elephant less.

But Hattie is different. When she was placed in the Zoo she came under the tutelage of Bill Snyder, who knows more about elephants than all the elephant specialists who are examining the stricken Hattie. Hattie warned up to Bill, something that Jewel would not do, and Bill taught her many quaint little tricks.
